This invention relates to a tool for dispensing a dry particulate. More specifically, it relates to a dispensing tool having an elastic, tubular cover to cover the dry particulate, said cover being pierced to dispense the dry particulate. In the dispensing of dry particulate, such as flour, often the dry particulate is pre-packaged and put out for dispensing by a restaurant or other establishment. In these cases, the dry particulate often becomes separated from the packaging and must be separated from the dry particulate to dispense it
